PHOENIX - A two-cent sales tax on food is being voted on Tuesday, and it looks like you will be paying more for groceries in Phoenix.

The Phoenix City Council voted 6-3 to approve a two percent food tax. Hundreds of people packed into the council chambers to share their opinion.

"I came here thinking I was going to be opposed to the sales tax increase," Kathryn Kober said. "Listening to the fire employees and the police employees, I think I've been persuaded to go with the sales tax."
